

Doofenshmirtz Evil Incorporated

Monologue Disclosure Policy — Version 1.0

1. Purpose

Legal has determined that most of the company's schemes fail because the scheme is fully explained, out loud, to a trapped platypus. This policy limits what may be disclosed during an evil monologue.

2. Scope

This policy applies to anyone delivering a monologue on company time, especially the CEO.

3. Disclosure Limits

3.1 Permitted Content. A monologue may include a tragic childhood backstory, the name of the inator, and a general sense of menace.

3.2 Prohibited Content. A monologue may not disclose the location of the self-destruct button, the inator's weakness, or the exact time the scheme begins.

4. Monologue Length

4.1 Maximum Duration. Monologues are limited to 10 minutes. Legal notes that a trapped nemesis typically escapes at minute eleven.

4.2 Backstory Allowance. Backstories about Gimmelshtump may run an extra 2 minutes, because they are always relevant, according to the CEO.

5. Audience

Monologues may be delivered only to a captured nemesis, a mirror, or Norm. Monologuing to vendors during price negotiations is prohibited.

6. Acknowledgment

Anyone who has ever said 'and now, I will tell you my plan' acknowledges this policy.
